

Anne began her professional career in London, where she worked as Researcher in an academic department at the Royal Free Hospital School of Medicine during 1995-1999. From 1999 onwards, she has worked in the field of HIV and harm reduction in international organisations, including in UNAIDS, UNODC and UNICEF in several countries in East Asia and the Pacific, South Asia and South West Asia. In addition, she worked as Project Director and Research Coordinator with the Johns Hopkins University Bloomberg School of Health, off-site in northern Vietnam, where she oversaw implementation of a randomised controlled trial aimed at evaluating an HIV prevention intervention among people who inject drugs.

Anne holds a PhD in Health Psychology from University of London (2002) and an MSc in Epidemiology from the London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine, University College London (2017). Anne relocated from Myanmar to join the EMCDDA in March 2019 to take up the post of Scientific analyst on health in the EU4Monitoring Drugs (EU4MD) project.
